Biretta Books To Publish Ozorak Chant Sheets In Book Form

As reported here earlier, last Sunday, April 3, Chicago's Society of St. John Cantius presented Windsor's Gregorian Chant Sheet author Michel Ozorak with the Golden Rose award for his contribution to the musical patrimony of the Church. At the presentation, it was announced that the Society's publishing arm, Biretta Books, will be releasing a book series of the Chant Sheets, under the title, "Cantus Clericorum Romanum" [Roman Clerical Chant]. The first book, an 800 page volume containing the Epistles, Gospels, Collects, and Postcommunions for all Sundays and First Class Feast Days, will be available later this month. The chants for Holy Week are included; 1962 versions of those chants have heretofore been out of print and very hard to find. Future volumes will be published as Michel produces chant sheets for additional days in the Church calendar.

The book will have a gold embossed red leather cover. Fleur de Lis symbols mark the ends of the cross in the center, reflecting Michel's French heritage as well as the Fleur de Lis symbols found throughout Windsor's Assumption Church, a parish founded to serve French settlers.

With the publication of this book, there may well come a day when "Do you use Ozorak?" becomes an expression used in liturgical circles much like "Do you have a copy of Fortescue?" is today.

Standing Room Only Congregation For Bishop Boyea's Ann Arbor Mass

Also on April 3, Lansing Bishop Earl Boyea offered Holy Mass in the Extraordinary Form at Ann Arbor's Old St. Patrick Parish. With this visit, Bishop Boyea has now celebrated Mass at each of the four Tridentine Mass sites in the Diocese of Lansing, Old St. Patrick being one whose establishment he encouraged. A congregation of approximately 300 filled the pews, side aisles, and vestibule of the small, historic church.

As is typical at our major regional Masses, it was a cooperative affair: Vestments and supplies from Assumption-Windsor, St. Josaphat, and St. Albertus were used. Altar servers from St. Josaphat and Assumption assisted. And appropriately enough, given the above topic, His Excellency employed the Ozorak Chant Sheets.

Special thanks are due to pastor Fr. Gerald Gawronski and to Paul Schultz for making the myriad of arrangements behind this Mass.
