For the second year in a row, Catholics in central London, England have put on a multi-rite series of daily liturgies for the week preceding Corpus Christi. Masses this year were offered according to the Traditional Dominican Rite [photo of Fr. Lawrence Lew, OP, celebrant, by Mark Lambert], the Anglican Ordinariate Use, the Syro-Malabar Rite, the Ukrainian Catholic Divine Liturgy of St.

John Chrysostom, the Ordinary Form in Latin, and the Ordinary Form in English. One of the celebrants was Archbishop Claudio

Gugerotti, Apostolic Nuncio to Great Britain. All Masses were held at Corpus Christi Church on Maiden Lane in Covent Garden. This historic church, one of whose early pastors composed the hymn Sweet Sacrament Divine, was recently restored and named the Archdiocesan Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament.

The Westminster Archdiocese did a podcast interview, “The Eucharist as the Sacrament of Unity”, in 2021 with some of the priest coordinators of the event. Churches known for the Latin Mass, including Corpus Christi Maiden Lane, St. James Spanish Place, and the Jesuit Farm Street Church, were represented in the lively discussion. Listening to that recording, one is struck by the profound faith and love of liturgy of each of these clerics:

We will never cease to marvel that London is Latin Mass paradise, where almost every central London church offers high quality liturgy with professional-caliber sacred music. London Catholics proudly celebrate their faith in the public square, with frequent processions along main streets, attended by thousands. ### Liturgical Book Restoration and Repair

Many of us have historically and sentimentally significant Catholic books in our possession, especially old missals. These books are often out of print and irreplaceable, yet are being used and are slowly but surely falling apart.

A company has appeared on the scene which specializes in the repair and restoration of these liturgical books: Libri Sancti. Visit their web site to learn more about their services and ways they can refresh these books to almost-original condition:

A reader also recommends Wallaceburg Bookbinding, a firm that many Diocese of London, Ontario parishes use to repair liturgical books: <https://www.wbmbindery.com/>
