April 16, 2023 – Low Sunday

Sacred Music Colloquium Schedule Published

As we reported in our January 29, 2023 column, the 2023 Sacred Music Colloquium will be held this year in Detroit, Monday – Saturday, June 19-24. All of the housing at Wayne State University has already sold out, however tickets are still available for locals and those who can make their own housing or hotel arrangements elsewhere. Archbishop Vigneron will give one of the talks, on Wednesday, June 21 at 10:50 AM. The detailed schedule of talks and liturgies has been published at: <https://www.churchmusicassociation.org/schedule/>

The public is welcome to attend the Masses, all of which will be held at Old St. Mary's Church, even if you are not registered for the conference. There will be Masses in the Extraordinary and Ordinary Forms.

Chant & Vocal Intensive Course in Ann Arbor

Sacred Music Summer Intensive

We are pleased to extend a warm invitation to you to participate in our upcoming Sacred Music summer courses, which will take place June 26-30 in Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Join us for the five-day program that focuses on developing practical skills to execute Gregorian chant and vocal pedagogy. This program is designed for organist, cantors, clergy and choir directors who are looking to deepen their understanding and appreciation of the sacred music tradition of the Catholic Church.

You will have the opportunity to study with renowned instructors and engage in intensive workshops that cover a range of topics, from vocal technique to music theory.

The summer courses will be held at the beautiful St. Thomas the Apostle Church in Ann Arbor, Michigan, and will run from June 26 to the 30th.

In addition to the workshops, lectures, and classes, you will also have the opportunity to attend Mass and Liturgy of the Hours, providing the opportunity to experience the beauty and richness of the liturgy firsthand.

Thomas the Apostle Church in Ann Arbor, Monday – Friday, June 26-30.

Fota Liturgical Conference

Further afield, the 14th Fota Liturgical Conference in Cork, Ireland will be held Saturday – Sunday, July 1-2. While this has historically been an excellent conference, publicity is lacking. There is no web site, and details are usually provided only a few weeks before the event at www.newliturgicalmovement.org. Do not let this deter you, however; not only are the talks interesting, a trip to beautiful Ireland with many Catholic shrines, chapels, and cathedrals to visit is worthwhile on its own.
