Historic Photo of Holy Name of Mary Church

First Communion Class, 1938.

James Murphy discovered and colorized this 1938 photo of a First Holy Communion at Holy Name of Mary Church in Windsor. Contrasting it with the present day photo below, it is incomprehensible that the High Altar, Communion Rail, Side Altars, and murals above and around the altar would have been removed. So many of these historic photos illustrate how vibrant the Catholic Faith used to be in the typical Catholic parish of the day. Let us keep in mind, though, that the beauty that was taken from our churches can be restored, given sufficient motivation, financial resources, and permission from Church authorities.

Historic Photo of St. Bonaventure Monastery Chapel

On September 20, 2026 the “Blessed Solanus Casey” Facebook page of the Solanus Casey Center published this historic photo of a Solemn High Mass at their St. Bonaventure Monastery Chapel. While the chapel has undergone commendable restoration towards its original look in recent years, the actual original arrangement, complete with Communion Rail and Side Altars, is more impressive. As this column has previously noted, however, in recent years the Solanus Casey Center has hosted occasional private Traditional Latin Masses offered by visiting priests in the Friars’ Chapel located behind the High Altar of the main chapel.

Marians of the Immaculate Conception Priest Training Report #2

Congratulations to Fr. Daniel Klimek, M.I.C., Ph.D., author and Marian theologian, who celebrated his first Traditional Latin Mass at the Shrine of Divine Mercy in Stockbridge, MA on Wednesday, September 16, 2026, after training from Extraordinary Faith. Another priest also participated in the training, and three postulants learned to serve the Mass. This is the second training session that the Marians of the Immaculate Conception have arranged as they seek to introduce the TLM as part of their ministry.
